

Photography By:
Maybelin Garcia Romero

Nestled in Melrose District—one of the most LGBTQ-friendly neighborhoods in Phoenix—you'll find Modern Manor. This place is a vintage-modern furniture shop, a showroom, a restaurant and full bar, and a studio event space. If you're looking for something to do on a Friday afternoon after a coffee date, this is the place to explore on 7th ave. The Modern Manor sign is hard to miss—the playful typography in yellow, black, and white will lead you straight to the shop. When you walk in, you immerse yourself in mid-century modern furniture that feels very edgy and organic. Another detail that stands out is the checkered retro pillows that sit on couches, scattered throughout the shop. Feel free to hop on a couch and gossip for a bit with your date, take some Instagram-worthy pictures while you are at it. There's an array of furniture, frames, board games, clothing, and lamps that can inspire your next interior design project. Imagine walking through an Ikea showroom, except you can escape faster and the items are available immediately. If you feel inclined to purchase at this high-end furniture shop, there are always old-school cameras in a briefcase that are about $10 apiece. Experiencing the shop feels like a hangout where you are free to take all the pictures you want, sit on fancy furniture, and the clerk won't yell at you for doing so.

“IMMERSE YOURSELF IN MID-CENTURY MODERN
FURNITURE THAT FEELS VERY EDGY AND ORGANIC”

